SATURDAY, AUGUST 31, 1912

THEN AND NOW

This is what Governor Wilson said in his commencement address at Princeton in 1900:

You know what the usual standard of the employe is in our day. It is to give as little as he may for his wages. Labor is standardized by trades unions, and this is the standard to which it is made to conform. No one is suffered to do more than the average workman can do; in some trades and handicrafts no one is suffered to do more than the least skillful of his fellows can within the hours allotted to a day's labor, and no one may work out of hours at all or volunteer anything beyond the minimum. I need not point out how economically disastrous such a regulation of labor is. It is so unprofitable to the employer that in some trades it will presently not be worth while to attempt anything at all. He had better stop altogether than operate at an inevitable and invariable loss. The labor of America is rapidly becoming unprofitable under its present regulation by those who have determined to reduce it to a minimum. Our economic supremacy may be lost because the country grows more and more full of unprofitable servants."

And this is what Governor Wilson said in his letter of acceptance. Wilson was not looking for the support of organized labor in 1900; but he is trying to get the union labor vote in 1912. This accounts for the governor's pretended change of heart:

The so-called labor question is a question only because we have not yet found the rule of right in adjusting the interests of labor and capital. Here, again, the sense of universal partnership must come into play if we are to act like statesmen, as those who serve, not a class, but a nation.

The republican standpatters, aided by their democratic allies in congress, are determined to get Roosevelt in one way or another. They are leaving no stone unturned in their attempt to cast odium upon his election and administration. The senate committee investigating campaign contributions is attempting to find out only such matters as would tend to cast reflection upon the Colonel. The fact of the matter is, the leaders of both old parties are alarmed at the tremendous uprising in favor of the progressive movement. The senate committee, and the big interests back of it, will find they have stirred up a hornets nest. They can't fool the people much longer.

CORRESPONDENTS continue to write to the Herald to inquire why the American policy in Mexico with disrespect to American interests has been so utterly at variance with American precedents set in every quarter of the world during more than a century of national life. We cannot state in detail with certainty just what lies behind the recent policy of the American government in Mexico, but we are as certain as can be of anything not conclusively proved that the real reason, if nakedly disclosed, would disgrace the national administration, disgust the American people, and fire them with righteous indignation.—El Paso Herald.

FROM a careful perusal of the papers nowadays it is easily seen that T. R. and his third party movement is causing both the old parties considerable anxiety. While they belittle the movement editorially, the news columns tell the story and cannot be suppressed. It looks as if those far-seeing and sanguine sportsmen who vigorously shot their arrows into the bull moose at the Chicago convention are going to see some mighty fine hunting before the second Tuesday in November, says the Buckeye News. The bull moose has been wounded, and, true to his instincts, he is on the rampage.

TOM CAMPBELL, of Prescott, is to be the republican nominee for congress. His petition has been filed with the secretary of state. He will oppose Carl Hayden, the incumbent, and R. S. Fisher, of Phoenix, who has been nominated by the progressives.

GREAT preparations are being made by the business men of Winslow for the Frontier celebration to be given there Sept. 19, 20 and 21. The program outlined for the event is a good one and the attendance should be large.

It is said the bunch of politicians closely connected with President Taft have convinced him that the progressive movement is fast dying out and that there is no doubt of his (Taft's) re-election. Poor Willy!

REGISTRATION will close this evening at 6 o'clock. Today is your last chance to get your name on the great register if you want to vote at the primary election.

Dangerous Advice

"Beat your wife, and if she proves unfaithful to you, kill her," is the simple and concise platform laid down for the handling of present day spouses by William F. Vaughn, who contributes this advice to "The Alienist and Neurologist." The expert believes that we should go back to the principles of the cave man; invade, for instance, the home of our beloved, a gingerbread mansion on Fifth avenue, where she enjoys the luxuries provided by her multi-millionaire father; grasp her firmly by the hair of the head as she sits combing the former in her pink and gold boudoir, drag her down five flights of stairs to the street, throw her over our shoulder and beat it to the primeval seclusion of our rugged cavern on the sixteenth floor of a flat building.

We fear that Dr. Vaughn may start something that he can't stop. His advice in full is as follows:

When you find your mate, take her. She awaits marriage.

When you have her, live for her. She wants that.

When she arouses your jealousy, beat her. She expects such treatment.

When she has betrayed you, kill her.

These are four maxims which govern man in relations with his wife.

There is a constantly thickening coat of the varnish of civilization formed over the man and the woman, but underneath they are identical with the cave man and woman, unchanged at heart. The simple maxims that ruled the cave dweller govern humanity today.

Every woman sits and waits the coming of her lord. She is ready to follow when he beckons. He is masterful. He woos not, beseeches not, implores not, serves not. He takes his own when he finds it.

His ancestor caught his woman, knocked her down if she resisted and dragged her, none too gently, to his lair.

The nearer the modern approximates this type and method the better it suits the woman.

Some women require beating. Lacking it, they escape from the husband's control and are incapable of controlling themselves. They look farther for the master. The woman is debased. She spreads demoralization. She rejoices in her shame.

In mercy to her, then; in justice, when she has betrayed you, kill her. Thus speaks primitive barbaric nature.

Board Must Appoint

A recent decision by Attorney General Bullard says that all justices of the peace and constables' offices will become vacant January 1, 1913, and will have to be appointed in the new districts in the different counties by the board of supervisors, under the new law passed by the last session of the legislature.

As the new laws ripen during their ninety day incubation after passage, the people will be more and more surprised and pained at the wonderful difference in laws since they last used them, including many new wrinkles in public conduct that are bringing wrinkles to the brows of learned legal luminaries.

The County Newspaper

'Tis a thing of sentiment, this little country newspaper. When perchance disgrace paints the scarlet letter on the family circle, it listens to the pleadings of the broken heart and whispers not of it. When it does you a favor you come in and beg a few extra copies, but when it steps on your toes you drop around to lick the editor. Without your dinky country paper your towns and hamlets would be like the man who threw kisses at the girl in the dark—he knew it, but nobody else did. You might imagine you were alive, but other people would have to buy a railroad ticket to come out and see for themselves.—Ex.
